

Abstract

Twisting and flipping of a necklace along its length may be prevented by restricting the articulation of the links. By providing one section with links that permit articulation only in a vertical direction and another section with links that 5 permit articulation only in a horizontal direction, flipping and twisting can be prevented.